

The Encore Affect

“How to Achieve Remarkable Performance in Anything You Do”

By: Mark Sanborn

Short Description of the Presentation:

The question is: “Are you an encore performer?” Do others want more of your time and/or wish to learn from you? We don’t want to be considered the best at what we do. We want to be considered the “only” person that can do what we do! This presentation will detail the process of becoming an encore performer.

Key Points:

Encore performers have their own PDA (Performance Development Agenda). It means we are very purposeful in getting better at what we do. The three goals for our PDA are to:

- Become a more remarkable performer
- Become a more remarkable person, and to
- Help others become more remarkable in their performances and their lives.

Passion alone will not make you successful. You need passion and process.

Four sources of passion:

1. Be passionate about WHAT you do
2. Be passionate about HOW you do it
3. Be passionate about WHO you do it for
4. Be passionate about WHY you do it

Passion is the fuel, but performance is the engine.

Five (5) “P’s” that will make us an encore performer are:

1. Preparation - You prepare for what you love
2. Practice – Paying attention to what we are learning
3. Performance – Great performances make us act, think, feel good and laugh
4. Pitfalls – All pitfalls are either avoidable, anticipated and/or unavoidable
5. Polish – Keep polishing until its time to go home!
